Subscribe now »

Easy to unsubscribe at any time. Your e-mail address is safe — here's our privacy policy.

Postgres Weekly

Issue 61
June 11, 2014

Postgres Open 2014 Early Bird Tickets and Tutorials

It takes place in Chicago between September 17-19.
POSTGRESQL.ORG

PostgreSQL SWAG: JSON Data Type and Working with Twitter Data

A look at how easy it is to use Postgres' JSON datatype to work with data imported from Twitter.
BIBHAS DEBNATH

Postgres 9.4 Feature Highlight: Logical Replication Protocol

Logical decoding made its way into Postgres 9.4 laying the groundwork for much of the future of replication and scalability for Postgres. Here's a deeper dive into how you can start to take advantage of these features as soon as you're running 9.4 in production.
MICHAEL PAQUIER

Technical Teacher for PostgreSQL and SQL Needed

Love Postgres? Want to help teach and make it accessible for others? Code School wants you to help spread the good word of Postgres to others and educate them on it.
CODE SCHOOL SPONSORED

PostgreSQL's Hipper, Feistier Self: An Interview with Bruce Momjian

Postgres was long known as the safer, more conservative database compared to others. For years it focused on just keeping your data safe, but in more recent years it's become more trendy. Here's a great interview with Bruce Momjian of Postgres core on many different aspects of where Postgres is at and where it's headed.
TECHREPUBLIC

25 Features Your Developers Are Missing When Not Using Postgres

Want a cheat sheet of features that you're missing out on when not using Postgres? Here's a great one ranging from the obvious of JSON/hstore, to the more specialized ones in dealing with auditing and unlogged tables.
SAMEER KUMAR

PostgreSQL Columnar Store Benchmarks On SSDs

If you missed the columnar store release by Citus Data a few weeks ago, or are wondering on what it really means, here's a first look at some benchmarks from Citus on SSDs on performance benchmarks.
CITUS DATA

Want to subscribe? Enter | Subscribe now »

Easy to unsubscribe at any time. Your e-mail address is safe — here's our privacy policy.